There is nothing quite as satisfying as a good "standing" crop.

But a destructive hailstorm can ruin that crop in seconds. High winds can severely damage a dwelling, barn, or other building. Lightning loss is a big concern at this time of year.

An overflow crowd of relatives and friends attended the funeral service of the late deacon Jessie W. King last Saturday at the White Oak Grove Baptist Church, Phenix. He was born in Prince Edward County November 15, 1896 and entered into eternal rest at his home, Appomattox, Tuesday, May 29 at 4:15 a.m. At an early age he professed a hope in Christ, joined the Alabama Baptist Church where he served faithfully and was ordained as a deacon. Lawing, Sr. Deacon Ray Robinson sang a solo. The home choir rendered music along with the Sulphur Spring Church senior choir. Burial was held in the family plot of the church cemetery. West Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

Lawson Ford Is Participating In New Customer Relations Program

Lawson Ford, Inc., Appomattox, is participating in a new customer relations programs, the Ford Consumer Appeals Board, a five-member panel independent of Ford Motor Company which will meet periodically to mediate unresolved customer service complaints.

According to Dick Bland, General Manager of Lawson Ford, the board is being established for owners of Ford and Lincoln-Mercury vehicles in Virginia. A second board also was established for dealership service customers in Metropolitan Washington, D. C. and Maryland, including four northern Virginia counties of Arlington, Fairfax, Loudoun, and Prince William and the cities of Alexandria, Fairfax, and Falls Church, Virginia.

"The boards' five members include a Ford dealer, a Lincoln-Mercury dealer and three consumer representatives who were recommended either by the U. S. Office of Consumer Affairs or by the attorney generals of Maryland and Virginia.

"This experimental program will supplement the company's existing complaint-h a n d l ing machinery," Mr. Bland said. "In those rare instance where the customer feels he hasn't been treated fairly by a Virginia Ford or Lincoln-Mercury dealer or by the company on a service matter, he'll be able to appeal to this board."

The board will review documents submitted both by the customer and the dealer, and any necessary supporting data, and will reach a decision by a simple majority vote of the five members. Decisions of the board will be binding on Ford Motor Company and its dealers, but will not be binding on the customer.

"While we have made major strides in owner relations in the last few years," Mr. Bland said, "we think this new concept will be a giant step forward in improving the image of Ford Motor Company and its dealers and in establishing even better credibility with our customers."

The Ford Consumer Appeals Board will deal with service-related cases only, and will not handle cases in litigation or those involving sales or delivery problems, personal injury or property damage, or claims for consequential damages.

Mr. Bland said that, as in the past, Lawson Ford will do everything possible to correct its customers' service problems. However, he said, if the customer still is not satisfied after talking both to him and to a district office of Ford Parts and Service Division, he then can contact the board by calling a toll-free number, (800) 241-8450, or writing to P. O. Box 307, Sandston, Va. 23150.

"We think that with this pioneering effort we can prove to the government, to the country's consumer leaders -- and most importantly -- to our owners that Ford and its dealers really do care, and that they have a responsive means of allowing a fair and just review of any service problems," Mr. Bland said.

Complete details of the program are available at Lawson Ford.
